

Ljubica is a senior research fellow at the Growth Lab at Harvard University, and a research scientist at the Complexity Science Hub Vienna. Her research focus is on human mobility, diasporas, and skill-technology relations. She also works on economic policy and has led or contributed to policy projects in Albania, Colombia, Germany, the Netherlands, Sri Lanka, and Sweden.

At the Growth Lab, she has led basic and applied research projects on the past and future of work, migration, and diasporas. She also consults for international organizations, such as the OECD and the International Labour Organization.

